Synopsis

It was an offer she couldn't refuse. After a frightening ordeal, Cara Martin needs a safe haven, and her estranged husband, Dr. Sam Martin, offers to share his home. Live with Sam? The man she'd married became a stranger long before their separation broke her heart. Yet when she arrives in his small Missouri town, Cara discovers the workaholic surgeon has become a general doctor who cares about people...cares about her. Can they possibly love, honor and cherish each other again, from this day forward? Originally published in 2007

Customer Reviews

I got this book and the 2 sequels on sale, and enjoyed reading them. Hannon has good insights into relationships and problems couples face, as well as how the past influences the way a person reacts to current situations.

This was a sweet story . I predicted the end. It took several weeks for two people to realize that they were en still in love and start over again .

Forgiveness is a necessary for a happy life, as we see in this story of two very busy professionals. God, uses some special circumstances to get the attention of this chef and Doctor, and to direct their attention to Him and each other!

Very good writing, plot, and character development. A realistic tale of trying to redeem a broken marriage.

This is a book that takes a look at the trials a marriage can endure. Communications are a important part of it.

Love it and the characters

Irene Hannon is a great writer!

I love this book!
