The World Trade Center Attack (History Firsthand)

Synopsis

The attacks of September 11, 2001, were called an act of war against the United States, similar to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor fifty years earlier. The authors in this anthology describe their experiences of escaping from the World Trade Center towers and watching the buildings collapse. Personal accounts of the rescue and recovery efforts; reactions by both politicians and ordinary civilians; and the Arab perspective on the attacks are also included in this timely and engaging volume.

Customer Reviews

"The contributions in the eclectic mix come from individuals such as Eleanor Roosevelt, actress June Havoc, and hobo Box-Car Bertha, with each person's perspective taking readers directly into the experience through details and eye-opening observations." -- Booklist (May 2001) (Booklist 20010515)"Following a thorough introduction that provides novice historians with background information, this series entry uses primary-source documents organized in a coherent chronology. With its important documents, this work will help budding historians and researchers make sense of a complex time." -- School Library Journal (July 2002) (School Library Journal 20020701)"These are in keeping with the aim of the series, to personalize history and, in this way, make it more meaningful." -- School Library Journal (May 2002) (School Library Journal 20020501)"The History Firsthand series presents excerpts from period documents, organized under broad subject heading and introduced by a paragraph of background. Each book includes a few black-and-white illustrations." -- Booklist (February 2001) (Booklist 20010215)
