Roger Price and Leonard Stern invented Mad Libs more than 50 years ago! They were also the co-founders of Price Stern Sloan.

I purchased these to use as a game for a church Thanksgiving-themed potluck. They are quite funny and lots of the older members remember having Mad Libs as a kid. Jimmy Fallon has made them popular once again on The Tonight Show, so most everyone knows how it works. Lots of quick, easy fun!

I enjoyed doing Mad Libs with my friends when I was a kid, and I knew my daughter would have fun with them too as she's really into writing her own little short stories and is very creative. Right now at age 7 in second grade they're really honing in on learning sentence construction and proper grammar and making sure they know how to identify different parts of the sentences. She was struggling a bit with identifying adjectives on some of her homework pages so I figured this would be a fun way for her to practice identifying adjectives and other parts of a sentence. She has been having a blast with this Mad Libs book from the minute we started it, AND the best part is she is learning and remembering different parts of a sentence - this is helping her identify nouns, verbs, adjectives and so on all while having fun. She was so excited after completing the first one and thought it was hysterical, she has already finished several pages in just the first few days. One of my best (semi-educational) purchases ever, I think I'll be picking up another one for a stocking stuffer.

I got this for my 7 year old niece and she loved it! She had a blast reading all the silly pages and trying to come up with as many silly combinations as she could! Great purchase! It also made for some cheap and educational entertainment while I was cooking which is always helpful!

Really fun way to liven up holiday time with the family, ages 3-83 enjoyed playing these and some were hysterical. It is also a really good way to remind all ages what parts of speech are... had to explain what an adjective was to an adult and one of the kids was able to do it since they'd been playing it earlier lol! Electronic versions are fine but this is old school fun : )

My family has a history of laughing our tits off at Mad Libs. This one kept us laughing and entertained at Thanksgiving!

we are still playing with this

I had family over for Thanksgiving and after the meal we played Mad Libs. I know it's fun and humorous in a "corny" kind of way, but that was perfect for the occasion. We did not use every page so there's more to come next year.

Fun stuff, historically accurate! Purchased for niece and nephew as they waited for thanksgiving dinner. They had a blast interacting with the adults. Nice quality paper, just like the old days when I was a kid!
